THE newest "rebel yell" is the following from the New Orleans Confederate Knapsack: "To-day we stand ready to protect the United States flag against its enemies, and are proud to live under it. THE Philadelphia Press says: One man in twelve in this busy land will be a pensioner on the labor of the other eleven if the pension agents at Washington have their way with Congress. About 800,000 soldiers and their relatives have applied for pensions or have them and the amount of these pensions, when all are granted, will be one dollar in every six of the cost of the war. There are besides 202,201 living soldiers and sailors who never applied for pensions. If these are put on the list, as proposed by acts before Congress, the United States will be paying more for its war expenditures than any two first-class powers in Europe.

ME. J. B. SARGENT, the largest individual manufacturer of miscellaneous wares in Connecticut, is pushing before the Legislature of that State a bill exempting from attachment the wages of the last ten days of a workman's labor. It directs that all wages shall be paid within ten days after each day's service is performed. Mr. Sargent's idea is that the mechanic would be greatly benefited and factories freed from legal process if the workman had frequent payments and paid cash for what he buys. Workmen generally favor the bill, but there are many thrifty agriculturists in the Legislature who are skeptical as to its effects, and its fate is doubtful.

TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE. A NEW JERSEY ROBINSON CRUSOE.

Stranded on the Black Jersey Coast in a Blinding Snow Storm—A Fearful Night in an Ice Hut.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 20.—Adolphus Parker, of Atlantic City, New Jersey, who is one of the crew of the yacht Sans Souci, owned by Charles Middleton, a Philadelphia real-estate agent, had a terrible experience. The Sans Souci is laid up for the winter near Barnegat Bay, which is about thirty-five miles north of Atlantic City. Young Parker started in a small skiff from Barnegat City over to the yacht. He found so much ice in the bay that he landed on Little Beach, to walk up to the yacht, which was about two miles distant. He had proceeded but a short distance when he discovered that the tide was rising so rapidly that he could not reach the boat, so he turned back, intending to return to Barnegat City. But on arriving at the spot where he had left his small skiff he found that it had been carried away by the incoming and still rapidly rising tide, which he had to sweep over the ice. He was now late in the afternoon, the weather was growing colder, and had every appearance of snow. As there was no house or other place of shelter on the island, Parker prepared for the worst by building a house out of the cakes of ice which were blown into the bay by the storm, or an elevated spot, and he thus describes the building of the house: "I took cakes of ice, laying them flat, then I placed on a layer of seaweed, then another lot of ice, and so on in this way until a sufficient height was attained; then I looked upon some driftwood, which it across the top, and covered it with what I called 'seaweed.' By the time the house was completed night came on, and it was the snow, which lasted all night. Parker, inside, was exercising himself in various ways to keep from freezing to death. He succeeded in passing away the night, though the tide rose around him to the depth of two inches, and when daylight appeared he crawled out to find a piece of ice, which he used as a sign of distress, which was seen during the morning by a bayman named Jesse Burchall, who, after braving a breaking sea, rescued Parker from death by starvation and freezing. He is now doing well, but complains of being frost-bitten.

THE NUTT TRIAL.

Reading the Letters of the Cowardly Villain Dukes.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 20.—There is no diminution of interest taken in the Nutt trial. Many ladies were present. Prominent among the visitors was the Chinese giant Chang, who was seated immediately under the throne of justice. James Nutt looked well and said he had passed a comfortable night. Miss Lizzie is still prostrated with grief and unable to attend. Mrs. Nutt and sister were again present. A portion of the morning session was occupied by listening to the testimony of several other prominent physicians and experts on insanity. All, without exception, in response to the same hypothetical question propounded by the judge, affirmed that the prisoner had been of unsound mind, and was a monomaniac on the subject of the removal of the Dukes. The testimony of each was summed up in the language of Dr. F. S. Shumaker, as follows: "He had no conscious mind. I believe he had no power to resist the temptation to avenge the wrong done the family. I don't think he was capable of knowing much about revenge, and I don't think he was deterred by reason by the grief, trouble, and anxiety, which unnerved him and made him insane. And I am fully convinced that he inherited this trouble of mind."

A portentous hum proceeded the offering of the three fatal letters in evidence by the defense. The first intimation the ladies received that their places was preferable to their presence was the rising of Mrs. Nutt and her sister and other female relatives of the family from their seats. When the Judge gave a broad intimation that the present had better retire, it was curious to witness the manifestations of disappointment in some and curiosity in others. A few seemed still inclined to remain, but finally the court room was deserted by the fair sex, some going directly home, but many waiting in the corridors until they could again be admitted. The leading of James Nutt from the court room, just previous to the reading of the letters, was an astute as well as a humane piece of work and had marked effect upon the jurors. Mr. Playford, with the documents in his hand, stepped high before the twelve, and in a slow, distinct accents, proceeded to unfold the mysteries of the pages he held. As Dukes' first hint was read, with its idle charges and vile criminal suggestions, the expression of the jurors changed from curiosity to indignation and disgust, while none stirred. When the lawyer completed his disagreeable duty, a murmur of a peculiar nature ran over the still crowd. It was as if one another's faces with the dumb show of feelings disgusted nature refused to frame in words.

The court room filled rapidly, and the arrangements for admitting visitors were that could be desired. The newspaper from Uniontown had been put in evidence was, by mutual consent, not read. The paper was so carefully guarded and placed in the hands of the stenographer with the privilege of each side referring to such portions of it as they desired. After hearing the evidence, the jury was then commenced by the prosecution. Their first witness was Thomas E. Beall, who had been a life-long acquaintance of the defendant. He testified in reply to the question, "Did you notice anything in him different from other boys?" replied: "I thought he was not as bright as other boys. He was always quiet and did not have much to say, and had peculiar ways. This very bad commencement of a relation evoked the attention of the jury, and a long conclusion ensued between the counsel. At the end, on motion of Mr. Patterson of the prosecution, the Court, after looking up authorities, gave the prosecution the privilege of so framing their questions as to elicit facts not dependent upon the testimony of the witnesses. This gave a greater license to the prosecution in framing their questions. In the second hour of the trial, by Mr. Beall, he said that when he (Nutt) wanted to join a military company the other boys objected for fear he might at some future time do injury to some of them.

Major Brown—"Why were they afraid of him doing them an injury?"

Witness—"Because the boys thought he was crazy."

Several other witnesses in rebuttal testified, and but one of them could say that at some time or other they had not considered him as lacking in mental capacity, and even this one acknowledged that he had always considered him slow of mind.

The court, having heard for the day, the attorney for the prosecution remarked that he had but little more testimony in rebuttal to introduce, and expressed much disappointment at the turn of affairs during the examination in the afternoon. The defense are highly gratified and jubilant over the present status of affairs.

He Speculated in Grain.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The Patchogue and Suffolk County Bank, a private banking institution owned by Edward S. Peck, as Patchogue, L. I., has suspended on account, it is said, of losses sustained in grain speculation by Mr. Peck, who was drawn into it by outside parties. Mr. Peck, who had formerly been in business in Brooklyn, commenced the banking business in Patchogue, Long Island, with a capital of $50,000. He is said to be a most prudent man, and was considered to be doing a successful banking business, but through these unfortunate grain speculations he has not only lost his own money but also that of his wife. No certainty as to the assets has yet been reached, and the liabilities are said to foot up to $150,000.

Two burglars raided Michael's hardware store on Milwaukee avenue, Chicago, in broad daylight Saturday, and, while one of them covered the son of the proprietor with a revolver, the other ransacked the premises. When they had fled, young Michael summoned an officer, and by chance they met the thieves face to face.

After firing at their pursuers without effect they turned to run, when the officers shot one, the notorious "Doc" Farmer, who was taken to the hospital in a dying condition.

Marvellous Skating.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The latest story of marvellous skating is just repeated. Robert Henry, of Fishkill, an athlete, is credited with skating from Fishkill Landing to Albany, a distance 101 miles, in ten hours and twenty minutes. This beats all previous known records.

Healthy People Sometimes Laugh

At the sufferings of dyspeptics, and say that their pains and distresses are imaginary. This is not meant for cruelty, but it is cruelty, all the same. A person who has a crooked foot, or a wound and lameness, or a sightless eye, calls forth sympathy by the exhibition of the defective member. If the dyspeptic sufferer's stomach could be placed on exhibition, the cause of his distress would be apparent.

The man with a troublesome stomach often suffers quite as much as the man with a broken leg, but is far less likely to receive sympathy. Sympathy is good for sufferers, as far as it goes. But Brown's Iron Bitters is better, for it strikes at the root of these troubles, and cures disease. Disappointed dyspeptics, weary of having tried many experiments in seeking cure, will do well to make one fair trial of Brown's Iron Bitters, and report the result. That this well-tried family medicine will thus diminish the quantity of human suffering is an established fact. 10

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

SANTA ROSA, California, Feb. 9, 1882. B. J. KENDALL & Co.—Gents: I feel it a duty to others suffering with the piles and swelling of the rectum to write to you. I have had the piles and prolapsus of the rectum for five years, for the past three years I have suffered the most agonizing pain. I tried every remedy without relief, but after ten days' use of Kendall's Spavin Cure, I have not seen or felt of the piles since. One who has not suffered as I have cannot comprehend the great joy that I felt at being cured of a disease almost worse than death. I had a valuable young horse that had a large hump gather on his breast bone. I tried all kinds of liniments and had it cut open without any benefit. New your advertisement and bought a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and ordered one week the lump had disappeared. Thinking that a liniment that would do what Kendall's Spavin Cure has done for my horse might benefit him. I tried it as a last resort. With gratitude and best wishes for your success, I am faithfully yours, J. H. GLENK.
